

CARDINALS, 1930 VICTIMS OF "A'S," SEEKING REVENGE

Hunger for Pennant and Large Sum That Accompanies It

STREET IS CONFIDENT

Capacity Crowd Almost Certainty in St. Louis Today

Batting Order?

—O—

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—(INS)—Here is the probable batting order for today's sixth game of the World Series:

Cardinals	Athletics
Flowers 3b	Bishop 2b
Roettger rf	Haas cf
Frisch 2b	Cochrane c
Bottomley 1b	Simmons lf
Hafey lf	Fox 1b
Martin cf	Miller rf
Wilson c	Dykes 3b
Gelbert ss	Williams ss
Derringer p	Earnshaw p

Game starts at 1.30 p. m., central standard time.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—This ancient place of habitation is sizzling today with the feverish belief that before twilight blots out the landscape the Cardinals will be horsehide champions of the universe.

They have gone roaring down the boulevards this day, these rabid fans; they have broken loose here and there and everywhere with salvos for the Cards, ending up with booming tigers for Johnny Martin, the greatest hero in World Series history. They have come out of the apathy that swathed them when the teams went away to Philadelphia and today they are suffering an acute return of the 1926 hysterics.

Those Cards, banged around in shameful fashion by the Yankees in 1928, and whipped without much mercy by the Athletics in 1930, hunger now for revenge—and the large end of the money that accompanies it. They have a high measure of confidence but no conceit. They know that the A's are fighting blokes who won't quit until the last ball has been thrown; they know that they must batter out of their pathway the brilliant George Earnshaw before the heights of glory are theirs.

"But I am quite sure we will do it," commented Gabby Street. "I don't think that Earnshaw can beat us again, not with the team whizzing along at its present momentum."

The A's have different views—naturally.

"Earnshaw pitched a game on the opening day that would have won 9 times out of 10," offered Connie Mack. "Had it not been for that Martin, he would have pitched a hitless game in his second start. He had the rest of the club completely at his mercy."

"George is right these days and when he is right he is a marvelous pitcher. He goes best in the toughest spots and today he will be facing the toughest he has known. I am sure he will come through with a victory, and if he does, well, we'll manage to get along quite nicely in the 7th game."

A capacity crowd seemed almost a certainty this afternoon. The home folk want to get another look at the man named Martin who was "oh, just a rookie" when the series began and since has become the sensational character.

ATTENDS CONVENTION

Mrs. James E. Keel, of Cedar street, is in Johnstown this week attending the W. C. T. U. State Convention, which is in session in that city from October 9th to 13th, Mrs. Keel being a delegate from the Bristol union.

Look Over the Bargains In This 10-Page Courier

—O—

That merchants are endeavoring to help the public in its quest for dollar-for-dollar value is attested to in the dozens of advertisements that appear in today's 10-page Courier.

For months, during the so-called depression, people have found that their dollar has been going farther than heretofore, goods of practically every classification having dropped considerably in price.

Today in the several pages of the Courier bargains galore are offered. Make use of your opportunity while you may.

Courier advertisers have learned the secret of securing much for their money, likewise, knowing full well that advertising space in the Courier is the most reasonable possible, in a few hours' time.

"Isn't It Grand?"

Mrs. Hugh Herndon, Jr., was one of the happiest wives in the world when this picture was taken of her as she joyously read the glad news that her husband and Clyde Pangborn had flown the Pacific Ocean from Japan to Wenatchee, Wash., to be the first airmen to accomplish such a non-stop feat. Mrs. Herndon, the former Mary Ellen Farley, who was married to Herndon just before he took off across the Atlantic, is shown in Albany.

SEVEN WORLD POWERS TO SPEND $420,000,000

Huge Expenditure to Be Made For Airplanes Before Next June

PLAN BIG DEVELOPMENT

By Edward B. Lockett

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

Article No. 1

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The world will spend nearly half a billion dollars in the air during the year ending next June 30.

Of a total of $420,000,000, the seven principal air powers will invest $345,000,000 in military and $75,000,000 in civil aviation during this period, a compilation of their aviation budgets reveals.

The United States, Great Britain and Russia will spend the bulk of the $345,000,000 which will go for air defense. France and Russia head the list of civil aviation spenders.

Development and expansion of military aviation in the United States during the twelve months period ending next June will cost $82,000,000. Great Britain will spend within a single million of this sum, and Russia's air expansion program, leading to a goal of a military flying corps equal to combined Europe, will cost $77,000,000.

France, already far ahead of the rest of the world in military aviation, will spend $49,000,000 during the year; Italy $25,000,000 and Japan $30,000,000.

For civil aviation France plans an expenditure of $21,000,000 for the year, and Russia $16,000,000.

The United States civil air budget for the year totals $12,000,000. Germany will spend $10,000,000, the British Empire a similar sum, Italy $4,000,000, and Japan $2,000,000.

All of these figures, with the exception of those of Russia, were slated for a scaling down during the year beginning next July. With Great Britain and Germany in financial trouble, and with the United States seeking to balance a national budget a billion dollars out of the way, international efforts are expected to result in a curtailment of air building programs for the fiscal year 1932-1933. A slowing up in Great Britain was held as certain assurance of similar action by France.

Only Russia is expected to continue a tremendous military air expansion program. This country started development of an air corps back in 1921 with the avowed intention of meeting combined Europe ship for ship and man for man. No indications of a change in this policy have been noted.

National aviation comes highest to Great Britain. This nation's program of $81,000,000 for military and $10,000,000 for civil flying figures to a per capita cost of $1.68 for the British. The United States aviation per capita cost figures to 69 cents, Italy's 79 cents, while the French per capita is 65 cents, the Russian 59 cents, the Japanese 37 cents, and that of Germany but 16 cents.

Aviation costs represent 16.12 per cent of the British defense budget, 16 per cent of the Japanese, 14.94 of the French, 13.38 of the Russian, 12.73 of the Italian, and 8.77 of the German.

American aviation represents 13.02 per cent of the cost of national defense.

Compared with the foregoing figures are those revealing that America defends 406 billion dollars of national wealth, Great Britain 130 billion, Germany 80 billion, France 70 billion, Russia 65 billion, Japan 40 billion and Italy 35 billion.

HONORABLE CHARLES EDWIN FOX, FORMER DIST. ATTORNEY, PHILADELPHIA COUNTY, WILL BE GUEST OF HONOR AT SCOUT DRIVE DINNER GIVEN TONIGHT

Three Hundred Leading Citizens From All Parts of Bucks County Have Been Invited to Meet Distinguished Man — Financial Objectives Announced for Sections

Hon. Charles Edwin Fox, former district attorney, Philadelphia County, will be the guest of honor at the invitational dinner to be given by Honorable Hiram H. Kelser, general chairman, Boy Scout Drive, at the Salem Reformed Church, Doylestown, tonight at 7 o'clock. Three hundred leading citizens from all over Bucks County, representing points as far distant as Sellersville and Bristol have been invited to meet Mr. Fox and discuss plans for a united effort to make possible a campaign for $50,000 to carry on the Scout program for the next two year period, as well as reach the hundreds of boys who are now without Scouting. Prudent consideration for the future welfare of our communities demands that their greatest asset be carefully conserved and thoroughly developed. This asset is embodied in the Boy Life of the Community. Scouting must go forward—never were influences tending to civic unrest and to threaten the national institutions we hold so dear more active at work. Never has the need for vigorous opposition to these forces been more urgent.

The quota committee of the Campaign has announced the following suggested objectives for districts and sections based on a two year program. These objectives have been carefully computed after thorough study of various listings and wealth represented in the respective sections.

WILL HEAR OBJECTORS TO MINTZER'S PETITION

Date Will Be Set at Which Time Arguments Will Be Presented

220 SIGNATURES ON IT

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 9.—A date for hearing objections to the filing of the petition of Joseph Mintzer, to have his name placed upon the November ballot as a candidate for Bristol Township constable has not as yet been set by the Court.

Mintzer's petition to have his name put on the ballot was signed by 220 residents of the township. Objections to the granting of the request of the petitioner were filed yesterday. The objectors, Dr. W. Albertson Haines, Leon Lynn, Edgely, and Thomas Crawford Lloyd, claim that the petition is irregular.

The filing of the petition is the outcome of the recent Primary election, at which time Mintzer, Crawford and Morrow were all candidates for the Republican nomination of constable. Crawford won the Republican nomination.

It is the desire of Mintzer that he be a candidate at the general election in November, and in order to do so his name must be upon the ballot. Hence his reason for petitioning the Court.

Daughters of America card party tonight, 8.30 o'clock, at F. P. A. Hall. Members are requested to be present.

YARDLEY W. C. T. U. IS STARTING ACTIVE PERIOD

To Join Two Other Groups In Sending Delegation to State Convention

REPORT ON NURSING

YARDLEY, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Louis C. Leedom, of Main street, was hostess to the local W. C. T. U. at their October business meeting. Mrs. Catherine Hatrick, vice-president at large, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Lucy Harper, who was confined to her home by illness. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Oliver Wharton.

An invitation was accepted from the Richboro Union to attend a meeting to be held on Tuesday, October 27, at the home of Mrs. Craven; and also an invitation was read from the Young People's Branch to attend an open meeting to be held in the M. E. Sunday School room this evening.

A donation of $3 was made to the nurse fund, while $2.50 was given to the library. The union decided to sell Christmas cards again this year, and 25 boxes will be sent for at once.

Mrs. Walter H. Thompson, the treasurer, reported $33 in the treasury. The Makefield, Fallsington and Yardley unions will unite in sending a delegate to the state convention to be held at Johnstown this coming week.

Mrs. Walter H. Thompson gave a report of the county convention held at Newtown, (while Mrs. Louis C. Leedom presided, continued on Page 2)

ARREST BANDIT SUSPECTS

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—Suspected of being implicated in the hold-up of the Yardley Trust Company, Hamilton Township, near Trenton, which netted the bandits $1,000, four men were arrested here early today. The suspects arrested gave their names as: Isaac Kaplan, 24; Morris Slagoff, 25; Alexander Nescypov, 26; James Rambo, 26, all of this city. The latter three are said to now be on parole. Five pistols were found in the machine when they were arrested. The men are held pending identification by victims of the hold-up and also face charges of violating the Whittaker Firearms Act. They will also be questioned concerning recent hold-ups here, police asserted.

BORAH ON CANCELLATION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 9.—An offer to give serious consideration to the cancellation of American war debts if European powers will reduce German reparations and disarm, was made today by Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, chairman of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "If Europe is willing to reduce reparations and disarm," Borah declared, "we could afford to consider cancellation."

BRITAIN'S VIEW

London, Eng., Oct. 9.—Indicative of the serious view Britain is beginning to take of the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria, the Marquis of Reading, British foreign secretary, will go to Geneva to participate in the League of Nations Council discussion of the problem, it was stated today.

GRANDI NOT TO VISIT U. S.

London, Eng., Oct. 9.—"I haven't the slightest intention of going to America unless unforeseen circumstances should compel me to do so," Mahatma Gandhi stated today. Gandhi has received numerous invitations to visit the United States but feels unable to go because he desired to rush back to India as soon as possible.

HURLS BRICK THROUGH WINDOW TO GAIN "HOME"

William Vorhis, 29, of Bristol, Desired Warm Prison Cell For the Winter

HOPE IS REWARDED

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 9.—Desiring a nice warm prison cell in which he might pass a goodly portion of the cold weather to come, William Vorhis, 29, of Bristol, picked up a brick and hurled it through a large glass window of the Clymer Department Store, here.

Residents opposite the department store had noticed Vorhis, a stranger to them, standing in front of the store for some time, looking at the windows and walking back and forth on the pavement.

Then they heard the crash and saw the brick land inside the window as the mysterious person ran through the alley next to the store and disappeared in the darkness about 9.30 last night.

Only a meagre description was given to the police by the few who saw the stranger loitering about the place. When Chief of Police James J. Welsh went on duty he noticed a dark complexioned man answering the description of the stranger, standing on the corner of one of the business intersections.

"What are you doing?" Chief Welsh started to ask the stranger. That was all that was necessary. The stranger who turned out to be Vorhis, had his cue and immediately said: "All right, I did it, I threw the brick through the window down there."

"I had no place to go and thought this would be the way to get down to the jail for a time," Vorhis told Chief Welsh.

Vorhis applied at the county prison for lodging and was accommodated a few nights ago. He liked it evidently and came back up town Wednesday for the purpose of giving himself up, but Chief Welsh beat him to it.

Vorhis waived a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack yesterday and in default of bail was committed to his idea of a "hotel," the county prison, until the next term of criminal court when Vorhis will plead guilty.

Vorhis told Chief Welsh that he had been working out at the fair grounds last week and was now out of a job and had no place to go.

Reno Crime Victim

Martha Hutchinson (above), a widow of Fairmont, W. Va., whose death following a party at the dude ranch of Cornelius Vandervilt, Jr., near Reno, has resulted in Dr. Carl P. Andre, a Fairmont dentist in Reno for a divorce, being charged with the murder of Mrs. Hutchinson, who, authorities declare, was either slain in Andre's car or was thrown from it with fatal results. The dentist and the girl were to be married after his divorce, it is said.

Fishermen From Bristol Return With Big Catch

Yesterday morning at daybreak a group of Bristol fishermen motored to Tuckerton, N. J., for a day's sport in Barnegat Bay.

They were successful in their quest, returning last night with 94 big fish, including weak fish, porgies, croakers, and a couple of fish. They also caught a couple of 10-lb sharks.

Those who enjoyed the trip were: John and Robert Weik, Rev. Howard L. Zepp, Rev. Charles Margerum, Thomas Argus, George Taylor, of Bristol, and Jacob Davis, of Wilkes-Barre.

LAHASKA RESIDENT LEAVES COMPANY'S STOCK TO HIS SON

Estate of Late William White, Sr., Estimated at $135,000

EXECUTORS TO BENEFIT

Late John F. Hamm Sets Aside $100 for "Lady Who Attends at His Death"

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 9.—The son of a deceased Lahaska man is named as heir of stock in his father's corporation, in a will filed here this week. The estate is estimated at $135,000.

The estate in question, that of the late William White, is bequeathed mainly to his son, William White, Jr., who is left all of the shares of stock in the corporation known as "William White & Son, Incorporated." Each of the executors have been bequeathed the interest of $12,000 trust funds, these being: William White, Jr., Margaret White and Frank Gnam.

The testament, which was supplemented by a codicil making arrangements for Mr. White's interment in the Friends' Cemetery, Lahaska, and also provided that he receive a Masonic funeral, left all the shares of stock in the corporation known as the "William White & Son, Incorporated," to his son, William White, Jr. Each of the executors were bequeathed the interest of $12,000 trust funds.

In a separate paragraph his will directed that the first wife of his son, William, Jr., and their children "should not receive any part of the estate."

George M. Shamalia, who died on September 25, named his widow, as heir of his $25,000 estate which was placed in trust in the Integrity Trust Company, of Philadelphia, and will allow her a monthly income. It was also his desire, according to the document, that she remain at the homestead at New Hope, so long as she may not be disturbed. Upon the death of Mrs. Shamalia the estate will be divided among their children.

Several grandchildren and a son will share the $62,000 estate of John F. Hamm, of Croydon, who died September 25, according to his will, probated here.

Two grandchildren each will receive bequests of $1500, a son will be named heir to a gift of $2500, and to a "small friend for his kindness," he bequeathed the sum of $100.

"To the lady who attends me at my death I give the sum of $100," was one of the paragraphs in the instrument.

Other wills filed included the following: Estate of Ida M. Stoneback, Springfield, letters to Robert John Harold Stoneback, and Esther Nettie Moyer Adams, $750; estate of Emma C. Vanzant, Hulmeville, letters to Lillian Ryan Goslin, $2500; estate of Ruth Boyd, Bristol, letters to Elizabeth Thiel, $7500.

Letters of administration were granted to the Doylestown National Bank and Trust Company amounting to $6,000 in the estate of John F. Myers, of Tinicum, and to Elizabeth and Newlin Hoge and in the estate of Frank Hoge and in Upper Southampton, amounting to $2500.

Inventories were filed in the estates of George N. Mood, of Bedminster, $2348.10, and Enos Detweiler, of Hilltown, $35,545.66.

SOUND POLICY

Suspension of Federal sinking fund payments during the present revenue shortage would offer a substantial contribution toward the meeting of the deficit. Sinking fund payments and other items of debt retirement next year will total $469,000,000. It is a tempting nest egg for spendthrift politicians.

The administration will not, however, have any part in such a scheme. Its opposition is soundly based. It sees in this situation another instance where the easiest way out is not the best.

Even a temporary suspension of sinking fund payments would be a mistake. It would, in the first place, amount to breaking faith with every investor in government securities under the assurance that the sinking fund would be maintained. Moreover, it would impair the nation's credit with the result that the government would have to pay higher interest rates on future borrowings.

The government is now able to borrow on exceptionally favorable terms because commerce and industry are not using the available supply of money, but it will pay dearly for these funds if business recovery is retarded by a government corner on the nation's capital. It will be a national calamity if industry, when it again seeks capital, finds the cupboard bare. When business revives it will want money, so Washington cannot proceed on the assumption that the existing plethora of idle funds will last forever.

Eternal smashing of fanatics is the price of liberty.

Hulmeville hockey team bowed to Trenton Black Hawks on Wednesday evening on the Hulmeville Park rink, score ending at 2 to 1.

Guests of Rev. and Mrs. Francis E. Walz at their Main street residence one day this week were Miss Alice Lehman, of Uniondale, and Joseph Schober, of Mount Royal, N. J.

Most eagerly was Rev. Philip Pent, of Oakhurst, South Langhorne, listened to last evening in the Methodist Church, as he vividly told of his experiences as a missionary in Peru, South America. Rev. Pent's activities as he and his wife have taught and worked among the South American tribes of Indians have been greatly blessed. They have been enjoying a several months' furlough in the states.

Epworth League business meeting will occur at the Methodist Church Monday evening at eight. Business meeting will be followed by a social period and refreshments.

FALLSINGTON

Winner of a scholarship awarded in international competition, Miss Emily W. Wetmore, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Wetmore, of Easton, formerly of Morrisville, has sailed to Germany for a year of study under master tutors of Munich. Miss Wetmore, a student of Wellesley College, won a scholarship offered by the Institute of International Education. A graduate of the Easton high school at 15, Miss Wetmore went abroad the year of her graduation and spent two years in Europe, studying at the Lucerne College, in Switzerland, and Baden-Baden, Germany. Upon her return to America she entered Wellesley College and won the international scholarship at the end of her second year. Upon her return from Munich, Miss Wetmore expects to complete her senior year at Wellesley. In her studies she has become adept in the arts and has made a name for herself in school circles by her talent for illustrating. Miss Wetmore is a granddaughter of Mrs. Joseph R. Comly, formerly of Yardley. Her grandfather was long a Yardley business man and at one time served as sheriff of Bucks County. Dr. Wetmore was well known in Fallsington and practiced in the village.

Mrs. Evan Saylor, Mrs. Stephen Woolston, Mrs. Louise Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carter attended the Republican Women's meeting at Doylestown on Tuesday.

CROYDON

Mr. and Mrs. George Sottung, of Logan avenue, motored to Strathmere and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Charleston.

Richard Leoffler, of State road, after an operation at Dr. Wagner's hospital, is doing nicely, and will return home next week.

Miss Florence Conn, of Second avenue, motored to Philadelphia on Wednesday where she enjoyed the day.

Dr. and Mrs. Gonzalez entertained friends from Philadelphia and Bristol at cards and luncheon Wednesday evening.

Michael Sottung, Jr., of State road, fell and broke his arm one day last week.

Mrs. James Quigley, of River road, entertained friends from Philadelphia on Sunday.

Miss Mary Alexander, of River road, received a very painful injury to her foot which was cut by glass.

The bridge on River road is now completed.

ANDALUSIA

Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham had as their guests on Wednesday evening their aunt and cousin from Norris-town, and Mr. and Mrs. William Rochelle, of Rockledge.

Mr. Smith, of Bristol pike, is making an apartment house out of his dwelling.

reported on the Frances Willard program held in the first grade of the Yardley school, and Mrs. William H. Applegate read some articles from the "Union Signal." Mrs. T. Sidney Cadwallader, legislative director, gave a talk in which she urged all to vote at the coming election.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The next meeting will be held on November 3rd at the home of Mrs. William H. Applegate.

The report of the Yardley-Lower Makefield Community Nursing Service for September, shows 154 cases, 287 visits, distributed as follows: Maternity, 14; child health, 116; adults (general), 24; home visits, nursing, 56; instructive, 115; conf. act, 81; visits to the school, 26; room inspection, 34; individual inspections, 90; first aid, 6; conferences with teachers, 38.

All the pupils in the grades were measured and weighed, and a large percentage were found to be under weight; corrections, dental, 2; tonsil and adenoid operations, 1 case (pre-school age); contacts excluded from school, 3; impetigo, 1 case; pediculosis, 3 cases, promptly corrected.

The October Child Health Clinic was held in the Municipal Building this week under the direction of Dr. H. Linn Bassett, assisted by Mrs. William Cady, for the community nurse, who was called to other duties; and Mrs. J. Augustus Cadwallader and Mrs. William Applegate, of the nurse committee. There were 12 children present, three for the first time.

MAY ORDER REMOVAL OF SIGNS THAT INTERFERE

Confusing Illuminated Signs Numerous, and Sometimes A Menace

AUTHORITY IN POLICE

Illuminated advertising signs that confuse motorists or interfere with traffic may be ordered removed under authority of an amendment to the Vehicle Code.

In calling attention to this amendment, the Keystone Automobile Club suggests there is plenty of activity in sight for the authorities in numerous communities of the State.

"Confusing illuminated signs are numerous," says the Club statement, "and they are a positive menace to motorists. This is especially true of the flashing signs located along highways that throw a blinding light on the roads. Night driving is made doubly hazardous by these devices."

The text of the amendment giving authority to the Secretary of Highways and local police to abate this nuisance is as follows: "The Secretary of Highways and local officials in their respective jurisdictions shall have the authority to cause the removal of all colored or flashing light signs, or other lights or signs so located as to interfere with traffic, or to be confused with or to obstruct the view or effectiveness of official signs, traffic signals or markings."

Another amendment to the Code makes it mandatory for local authorities to follow the uniform regulations for signs and markings published by the State Highway Department.

Formerly, the State's effort toward uniformity was confined to authorization of the Secretary of Highways to classify and mark State highways and to provide a uniform system of marking and sign posting.

The amendment reads: "The Secretary of Highways of this Commonwealth shall make and publish regulations for the design and location of all traffic signs and markings in this Commonwealth, and such signs and markings shall conform with and so far as possible conform with the system adopted in other states. Local authorities are directed to follow the uniform regulations for signs and markings as so provided and no other system shall be regarded as official."

Unauthorized signs, markers or traffic signals are declared, in another amendment, "to be a public nuisance," and authority is granted for their removal.

READ THIS FIRST

The owner of the Czarina rubies, Prince Murinov, loses his life defending them from a Russian revolutionary mob. Then years later Frank Severn goes to Russia, finds the gems and entrusts them to Felcroft, who disappears.

Severn returns to his country place in England and is kidnapped. His friend, Jim Wynter, tries in vain to save him.

Katharine Faring, once a celebrated young violinist, has had to give up her career, because of an injury. Lester Malin tries to trap her into accepting his attentions by falsely accusing her of stealing a necklace.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XI

The big figure swung back into the roulette room. He crossed over to Milly.

"Milly," he said abruptly, "not thinking of making a move just yet? Fact is I have to rush off unexpectedly for half an hour. I find. But I'll be back as soon as I can to escort you home."

"That's all right, Jimmy," Milly assured him, and wondered why his usually cheerfully smiling face should look suddenly so frowning and unamiable.

Wynter's eyes had just fallen on Malin, sleek, over-fed, with his confident self-assurance. Malin had come back from the telephone, no doubt to make his adieu to his hostess, but evidently in no great hurry as he paused watching the play.

Which was all to the good from the point of view of Wynter, who had rather set his heart on reaching Katharine's flat first.

At the door of the room he met a maid servant entering. She glanced at the tall figure.

"Mr. Wynter, I think?" she asked. "Some one wants you on the 'phone, sir."

Wynter, impatient at the delay, strode into the small room where the telephone was and growled into the transmitter.

SURPRISE

To his amazement it was Katharine's answering voice that came to him.

"Mr. Wynter, I'm rather desperately in need of a friend just now," she said, her voice a little breathless and unsteady, "and I thought of you. You are Frank Severn's friend—that is my only claim on you. But I'd be so grateful if you'd come at once!"

"Why, of course, straight away! As fast as a taxi will bring me. What's the address?"

It was an address within a mile of the Children's flat. Wynter hung up the receiver, grabbed his hat and coat, and was shot down the lift. It was rather wonderful that Katharine should have turned to him in her need of a friend.

Luck was with him as he ran out into the street. A taxi was slithering past with its flag up. He gave Katharine's address.

"And drive like hell!" Wynter added tersely as he jumped in.

It was a small, unpretentious flat, very different from that of the Children's. Katharine herself opened the door to him. Her rather apologetic smile of greeting could not hide the troubled look he saw in the dark eyes.

"Thank you for coming. It was good of you," she began.

"Good Lord! What's there to thank me for?" he laughed. "I'm only jolly glad that, finding you needed a friend, you thought of me."

Wynter followed her into a room simply, and mysteriously furnished. He was introduced to a little old lady with white hair and wonderfully young eyes looking out of a charm-

"You heard him accuse me? Then—then you must have thought I was a thief!" she broke out.

ing face like old ivory. This friend of Katharine's, who rather suggested a figure of delicate Dresden China was the Countess Drusloff, once a lady in waiting to the Empress of all the Russias and now a refugee thankful for pupils to whom to teach music. She shared this flat with Katharine. A rather shabby figure, but a grande dame, every inch of her still, whom adversity had not robbed of her cheerfulness, or vivacity, or charm.

For a moment the little old lady seemed to survey the big Englishman critically. Then she nodded her head, as if she approved of what she saw.

"Yes, Mr. Wynter, I am sure Katharine did well to turn to you in her difficulty—even at such an unconventional hour as this!" she said with smiling frankness in her delightful broken English. "Now I will leave you together to talk."

EXPLANATION

As the door closed behind her, the girl broke out.

"Tonight, Mr. Wynter, I had scarcely got back to my flat when I was rung up by that man Mr. Malin. He professed to have seen me slip Mrs. Grayson's lost necklace into my handbag—implied that I was a thief! Her eyes were passionately aghast. 'I listened amazed. It seemed fantastic madness—as I told him. But he ignored my words, said he was willing to shield me—on terms'—and that he was coming here tonight to talk it over. Oh, how dared he!"

"Glad I shall be here when he does come," said Wynter reflectively. "You know, as a matter of fact, Miss Faring, I happened to overhear by chance the beginning of what Malin said on the 'phone'—and because it had a very ugly sound, and because I was your friend, I made no bones about listening to the rest. When your message came I was just starting for your flat. I thought I might be of some service, if only to kick this damned sweep out for you."

Katharine looked at him in startled surprise. "You heard him accuse me? Then—then you must have thought I was a thief!" she broke out.

THE GIVE-AWAY

"It was only after I had walked away that I remembered I had left my bag behind in that little ante-room."

"And gave the man his chance—since, probably, he'd already found that dropped necklace. When he professed to accuse you, he really was giving himself away. How could he have known where the necklace was, unless he had put it there? Damn him!" growled Wynter.

A ring at the door of the flat cut across his words.

"There he is, I expect. Better he shouldn't see me just at first. I'll wait in this room, shall I, with the door ajar?"

Wynter's face was dark. A man capable of seeking to entrap a woman, as Malin had done, out of revenge, or still more evilly to get her into his power—oh, he was very glad that Katharine had turned to him!

Bull Fighter Arrested With Moonshine Still

Manuel Vallery, twenty-seven, of 743 Evans street, Bethlehem, who old State Police that his profession was that of a Spanish bull fighter, was arrested yesterday in possession of a moonshine whiskey still in the Bridgeton Township swamps.

The liquor manufactured in large quantities at the still, State Police say was shipped regularly to Bethlehem, where it was sold both retail and wholesale.

Charged with manufacturing and possessing liquor, Vallery was arraigned before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack, Doylestown, today and released under bail for the next term of criminal court.

On a charge of polluting a stream along which the still was being operated, Vallery was fined under the fish laws, $100 and costs.

Troopers Peter Greblunas and Toy, of the Doylestown State Police, arrested Vallery yesterday while he was in charge of the still, of 250 gallon capacity. There were four 700-gallon vats buried in the ground. The still was protected by an old shelter cover. Over 100 gallons of moonshine liquor, cans and other equipment were seized.

CAPONE'S TRIAL CAUSES UNREST IN UNDERWORLD

Many Killings Have Occurred Since Proceedings Got Under Way

WOMAN "PUT ON SPOT"

By Margaret Lane
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1931, by I. N. S.)
CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Al Capone's trial, instead of putting gangsters on their best behavior for a little, has stirred up a smoldering unrest in the Chicago underworld, and there have been several killings since the proceedings started.

For three days the net of criminal law has been spreading round the uneasy feet of Capone. Darning evidence has been admitted against him, although his attorneys protested for three and a half hours with a passionate shrillness that made the Court laugh. Capone has worn a different suit every day of the trial, and given his finger nails a good deal of nonchalant attention during the proceedings, but there hangs round him an air of apprehension that the waiting crowds in the streets take no trouble to conceal.

Yet, for all that there has been a sinister burst of gangster violence in the last twenty-four hours. The first "gun moll" to be put on the spot lies in the Chicago morgue with her body freckled with bullets and the bullet-ridden bodies of her two dogs lying on the cold slabs beside her.

Marion Miller was found dead in the back of Frank McErlane's automobile on the south side of the city in the early hours of yesterday morning. Her gangster lover, McErlane, with whom she has exchanged bullets before, was gone, her two dogs were shot to death beside her as though someone had sprayed the car with bullets in some unbalanced frenzy. The police have hunted all night for the missing man and the authorities are carrying out a secret scientific investigation in connection with the murder which is expected to yield valuable results today.

When the news spread through Chicago yesterday morning there was a buzz of horror wherever people were gathered together to talk. Marion Miller may have been a wild, lawless creature, but she is the first woman to be put on the spot in Chicago, and it has been a shock to the city.

The news filtered into the court room at noon, while Capone's lawyers were still haggling about the admissibility of a letter as evidence.

In the recess a man slipped up to Capone.

"What do you know about this, Al?" Capone smiled genially. "Not a thing. Wish I could tell you something about it, but I don't know any more than you. First I saw it was in the newspapers."

Capone and McErlane have a hostile acquaintance of some years' standing.

It seems as though Chicago were determined to live up to her reputation as a city of violent crime, in spite of the deprecators and Mayor Cermak, who constantly proclaim she is not so black as she is painted.

TO SPEED REORGANIZATION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 9.—Speedy reorganization of the House of Representatives when Congress convenes appeared probable today as both Republican and Democratic leaders mapped plans in the fight for control. The Republican organization, it was announced, will make a determined effort to settle the dispute with insurgent members before the House is called to order. Failing, it will definitely break with them.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

As the Revolutionary winds began to blow Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, James Monroe and other patriots spent their evenings before a huge fireplace in Rising Sun Tavern at Fredericksburg, where they discussed Colonial affairs in privacy. These informal talks as neighbor to neighbor were later to play a great part in the founding of America.

By James W. Brooks

THIS is called America's first drug store. Here Dr. Hugh Mercer practiced medicine in Fredericksburg. Next to the door at the left Washington long kept a private office. As events were moving him toward greater action, he provided the cottage at the right for his mother that she might be relieved from hardships at Terry Farm.

WASHINGTON'S BOYHOOD HOME TOWN

Side Lights in The News of World Capitals

LONDON

By O. D. TOLISCHUS

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Oct. 9.—When London was only a little cow-town, 1700 years ago, the flourishing Roman city of Verulamium, at the foot of the hill on which now stands St. Albans Abbey, was the queen of southern Britain.

There stalwart Roman legionnaires had feminine wives practiced upon them by maids as chic as any who ever trod the Forum, archeologists who are excavating at the site of the ancient metropolis are discovering.

Along about the year 300 a flapperish Roman girl scampered down the street of Verulamium and dropped her rouge pot. This summer the Verulam Excavation Committee found it. Also, workmen discovered as their shovels dug down into what had once been houses, such other examples of feminine adornment as hairpins, chain rings and copper jewelry tin-plated so as to look like silver.

Half of the site of the city which was England's biggest for 500 years is owned by the Corporation of St. Albans, which plans to convert its property into a public park. Before this is done, however, the excavators will have a chance to complete their work. The owner of the remainder of the site is the Earl of Verulam, who is also cooperating in the work.

A woman, Mrs. Mortimer Wheeler, is the active director of the work. She is one of the leading authorities on Britain in the time of its rule by the Caesars. Her husband, Dr. Wheeler, is co-director, and also an authority of Roman Britain, but his duties as Director of the London Museum prevent his giving his full time to guiding the uncovering of the city.

Although the work is not sensational, as many might imagine, Mrs. Wheeler's enthusiasm is infectious, and the work is progressing rapidly. The digging is done mostly by Welsh miners who would otherwise be unemployed. Fifty are at work, in addition to the corps of archeological students from various universities who are assisting Mrs. Wheeler.

The work, far from being dramatic, consists chiefly of laboriously cleaning bits of wall with a brush and carefully sifting every fragment of rubbish to see that no discovery of value is overlooked.

"What we really want to find out is how the people lived in those days and what they did," Mrs. Wheeler explained.

She remarked, as she stood in one room, that one day in the second century there "must have been a real dust-up" in a Roman household at Verulamium.

"Nice new tiles were being laid on the floor when some wretched dog came in and put his paws right in the middle of as many tiles as he could reach. The paw marks are still there."

The Roman soldiers liked a game of dice, she said, "and they had some beautiful gaming counters. There were made in shell, bone, glass and talence. Many a good game must have been interrupted by attacking Britons, for the counters had been dropped all over the city."

Among the other interesting finds are a beautifully patterned mosaic floor which had adorned some drawing room in Verulamium, bits of wall, plaster and moldings decorated with painted designs, money and coin dies, oyster shells, bone toothpicks, rakes, staples, nails, punches and pottery, often bearing the signature of the potter.

Soon villagers and visitors will be able to stroll along a part of the old Roman wall, once two miles long. It is now being cleared on the western side and will be maintained by the Office of Works. Already the site of the great gate 150 feet across and the finest in Britain—can be seen, and the workers have just come across a new corner tower.

Along the northern wall the defensive moats are now being cleared.

ed. There were two ditches flanked by earthenworks, the whole being 165 feet across, and at the point of tactical weakness the fortification is increased to 260 feet by another dyke.

Traces of the great road that went through the city have been found, and it is planned to follow it and find some of the public buildings that undoubtedly opened upon it. The local forum and the theatre were unearthed in previous excavations 80 years ago. Much of St. Albans Abbey is made up of stones taken from the walls and buildings of the Roman city.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE

Nine Hundred Fathers' Ass'n Members Watch Tumblers

Nine hundred enthusiastic members and guests of the Bristol Fathers' Association sociation wildly cheered the antics of 20 little members of Professor William J. Herrmann's school of acrobats and tumblers at the opening meeting of the season held in the high school auditorium last night.

These little girls, most of them about nine years old, danced, sang songs and demonstrated their ability as tumblers for two hours. Little Mickey Bradley, Middle Atlantic States tumbling champion, who is not yet five years old, captivated the crowd. This little tot bounced about the mat with the rest, never seeming to tire.

William Herrmann, Jr., tumbling champion of America, thrilled the crowd with his daring tumbling. This 20 year old youth performed feats last night that no other tumbler has ever been able to. The lad with his modest smile will lead the American tumbling team against the world at the Olympics next June at Los Angeles.

In addition to the tumbling, the audience was entertained by another world's champion in the person of Henry Steinborn of Germany, wrestler and strong man. Steinborn, who wrestles at the Arena in Philadelphia, and has met most of the leading wrestlers in the world, gave an exhibition bout with Paul Kochanski, another wrestler of note. The two big boys had the crowd in an uproar with their capers.

Program included:

Betty Protz, girl tumbling champion, present title-holder, and three-time winner of the Middle Atlantic Girls' Tumbling Championships.

Nellie Coulter, present title-holder and three-time winner of the Middle Atlantic Championships Artistic Acrobatics.

Mary Moss, Middle Atlantic Championships, all around tumbling and artistic acrobatics for girls under ten years of age and present title holder, 1931 Middle Atlantic Championships.

SLEEP TONIGHT END NERVOUSNESS

New Vital Discovery, VREEM, Banishes Terrible Sleepless Nights, Agonizing Nervous Days, Worry, Depression, Headaches. Brings Sleep, Strong Nerves

By DR. HARRIS H. LUNTZ

NOTHING wrecks health, saps vitality, ruins business efficiency and brings complete mental and physical breakdown so quick as dread sleepless nights and painful, nervous days. Physicians see the frightful consequences every day. Men have gone 63 days without food, but can live only 8 days when completely deprived of sleep.

Formerly there was little the doctor could do but give deadening, habit-forming narcotics and opiates. But since the War the best doctors and nerve specialists are prescribing a new harmless formula used during the War for shell-shocked soldiers. It had brought restful sleep, calmed shattered nerves at the front under the most terrific nervous strain ever known. Now for the first time this safe formula, known as Vreem, is sold by Hoffman's Cut Rate Store.

Sleeplessness, Nervousness Ended. New Vigor Strength

Vreem was originated by an eminent physician expressly to soothe and rest tense, irritated nerves, bring refreshing, dreamless sleep and invigorate tired bodies without narcotic drugs. It aids Mother Nature to re-charge a worn system, to rest a fatigued mind. It changes misery and depression to physical joy and mental strength. It is positively harmless, so safe it may be given to a child.

Throw Away Dope Forever

Throw away as fast as you can dangerous, habit-forming veronal, barbitol, chloral, morphine, heroin, opiates and narcotics. Vreem was especially designed to take the place in medicine of these perilous drugs. Not a chance to form a habit, no danger to heart or brain. If you want refreshing, healthful sleep, strong nerves, get Vreem at Hoffman's Cut Rate Store.

Almost Crazy with Sleepless Nights and Nervous Days. Now a New Man

I have personally given Vreem to many nervous men and women tortured with sleeplessness. They write me letters like the following: "I was a nervous wreck," writes Mr. Alfred Klass. "For years I had been restless, jumpy, irritable, dizzy and weak. Could hardly work, mind or body failed, terrible headaches. Tossed for hours at night without a wink of sleep."

"I had about given up hope when you gave me Vreem. That very first night I slept soundly and since then everything has changed. Nerves strong, I fall asleep instantly and sleep soundly straight through. Can work 13 hours a day and never feel it. Life is worth living."

Are Sleepless Nights, Nervous Days Dragging Down Your Mind and Body?

Don't suffer any longer with agonizing sleeplessness, tense nerves, headaches, misery, depression. Get Vreem tablets today, watch how quickly nerves calm, you feel like a new person. Take Vreem tonight, drop easily into a healthful, restful, dreamless sleep. Wake up tomorrow fresh, full of pep, ready for anything.

Sleep First Night or No Cost

So successful has Vreem been in conquering longstanding, stubborn cases that it is guaranteed in writing to bring sound, healthful sleep, calm and strengthen nerves, end nervous headaches, or it costs you nothing. If a ter taking half the bottle you are not delighted with benefits, take the rest back and your money promptly refunded. Buy Vreem at—

FIGHT OVER SPEAKERSHIP RECALLS CLAY'S DREAM OF WHITE HOUSE; FIRST OF GREAT SPEAKERS TRIED FIVE TIMES FOR HONOR

Eloquent and Beloved Leader of Whigs Found it Impossible to Satisfy His One Great and Consuming Ambition—Honored With Speakership Five Times

By Edward Mayl

(T. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—First of our great speakers of the house, Henry Clay of Kentucky—via Virginia—tried five times to enter the White House by way of the speaker's rostrum at the head of Henry Clay's party, or the Whigs. Eloquent, able, beloved by millions, this "millboy of the slashes," found it impossible to satisfy his consuming ambition, and went to his grave leaving but a heritage of defeat for the score of other men of public life who sought the road to the White House through this office.

From 1824, when he aided John Quincy Adams to the presidency, and became secretary of state, thereby further meriting the undying enmity of Andrew Jackson, Clay's eyes ever sought the mirage of the executive mansion. Five times his contemporaries of the House honored him with the speakership, only to wander after alien banners when Clay reached for the highest office of the republic.

However historians may disagree on the virtues of Andrew Jackson, they attest unanimously that he was a loyal friend, and a bitter unforgotten enemy. It was Clay's misfortune to back the wrong horse in the congressional run-off of the campaign of 1824, an act which the hero of New Orleans never forgot or forgave.

Clay at the head of the Whigs had received 37 electoral votes in his first national race. Jackson had led the field with 99; Adams was second with 84, William H. Crawford of Georgia received 41. None of the candidates had a majority, and congress was called to choose from the three highest, thereby eliminating Clay. Adams was returned the victor over the master of Hermitage, although the latter had received the greatest popular vote.

Clay, the Whig, became secretary of war under the Republican, Adams, as had been predicted by Jacksonians, before the run-off. They charged a deal between the Kentuckian and the New Englander. Clay had previously declined cabinet appointments from Madison and Monroe, but the "bargain" charge stuck and plagued Clay to the end of his days.

Four years later "Old Hickory," laid at rest all doubts as to "the people's choice," for the presidency, and dour old J. Q. A. left the White House to the mercy of the first Democratic administration. Jackson's electoral vote was 178, and Adams' 83. Clay returned to the House. In his third campaign the Tennessee warrior had the satisfaction of defeating Clay 219 to 49. In this campaign, Clay, a Mason, was sought by an anti-masonic group to lead their ticket, but he declined, and that body named William Wirt at the Baltimore convention. Clay and Wirt polled about 600,000 votes between them, against 700,000 for "Old Hickory."

History writes Clay as one of the republic's greatest "compromisers," and he could bring himself to compromise with Van Buren, Andrew Jackson's man Friday, but with "old Andy" he had nothing in common except that neither joined in the popular political clamor of their day in denouncing Aaron Burr. Both loved to battle, but their methods were foreign. Andrew had his say or killed his man, while Clay preferred the "blue Italian hand." Such is the record.

Clay cheered for the war of 1812, when cheering was safe, but Jackson stole the show, even if he did defeat the British at New Orleans, after peace had been declared. Six years later he was criticizing the old war horse for his unauthorized expedition against the Seminoles (and Spaniards) in Florida.

With Jackson again in the White House, Clay moved to the senate where he led the body to censure the administration on sundry matters, "nullification," slavery, the tariff and the banking system, as well as opposing the nomination of Martin Van Buren to the court of St. James. Even the Whigs became dubious of the Clay banner in '36 and shunted him for General William Henry Harrison, conqueror of Tecumseh. Van Buren outside, James G. Birney, abolitionist, to allow Polk to carry the Empire state and win the election.

At 72 the dream of the power and the glory of the executive mansion still dazzled the old man, and Clay "allowed himself to be deceived," and strove to break the line of Generals who were monopolizing the house on Pennsylvania avenue, but Zachary Taylor, "Old Rough and Ready," and Milard Fillmore became the nominees in 1848, with Clay, Scott and Webster as the also rans.

STATE NEWS

STATE COLLEGE, Oct. 9.—"No matter where you go," Edward K. Hibbsman, executive secretary for the alumni association of Pennsylvania State College, asserted recently, "there's a Pennsylvania State man."

"Our party had reached the end of a trail at Beauty Lake one night," he said, "about 150 miles from Hudson Bay. The population there is probably less than one man to three or four of our counties."

"Just as it was growing dusk we sighted three canoes. Evidently the men spotted our camp fire, for they headed directly for us. As they drew near, we hailed them and exchanged greetings."

"Aren't you Ed Hibbsman?" came a voice from one of the canoes, and when the party landed, two of them turned out to be Penn State alumni whom I had known as undergraduates."

ALLENTOWN, Oct. 9.—When a bee stings you, feel sorry—for the bee, the pain you feel is nothing compared to what the bee undergoes, for it loses its life entirely. And, whether you believe it or not, bees only sting once.

"The last thing a bee wants to do is to sting," Charles D. Ruth, former president of the Lehigh Valley Beekeepers' Association declared. "The only time a bee stings is in self-defense, when it becomes frightened or confused."

Ruth explained what happens when a bee stings a person. There is a barb, which causes the pain and swelling in the victim, pulled from the bee at the moment of contact and lodged in the flesh of the person stung. But this barb comes from a vital part of the bee—its abdomen and it lives only a few minutes after the sting.

The veteran beekeeper's advice to those stung by bees is to tear the barb out of the skin the moment one is stung, for otherwise the barb continues to work its way into the system further, making the work of healing much more difficult.

LANCASTER, Oct. 9.—The procedure was reversed here when a thief had to break his way out of a place after gaining his loot.

The American Legion home was the victim. The intruder apparently entered the home while it was open and then hid until all other persons had left the place. There as evidence that the thief had broken out of the place instead of forcing his way in. About $14 in cash and $30 in checks were missing.

EASTON, Oct. 9.—The contents of a can of grease which fell from a passing automobile brought disaster to a large bus near here recently and almost resulted in the deaths of several persons.

The bus driver was unable to control the vehicle and it skidded on the greased surface, plunged over an embankment and crashed into the home of Harold Jackson, ripping off bricks from the corner of the dwelling. The roof of the home was supported by the bus when the vehicle's dash was badly halted.

OIL CITY, Oct. 9.—An unusual case confronted medical men here when a man's cheekbone was shattered by a boy whom he sought to chase from a shed overlooking an athletic field. The man, an employee of the school district, was patrolling in the vicinity of the field to break up the practice of youngsters who climb over the fence and enter the park without paying.

There is little that can be done for the injury. It is said, without resorting to a delicate surgery operation.

It is possible that the injury will be left to mend itself, as was done in a similar case when a high school football player was injured in this vicinity several years ago.

AMBRIDGE, Oct. 9.—It was rats playing with matches this time, and the result was a fire in the second floor partitions of the home of Willard Crouch, of Alliquippa. The rodents are blamed for chewing the firesticks and starting the blaze. Damage was estimated at $200.

VITAMINS ARE NOT A NEW DISCOVERY OR FAD

Some People Skeptical As To Practical Importance of Vitamins

SOURCE IS EXPLAINED

Vitamins are not a new discovery in the field of medicine. Judging from the popular discussions of foods and nutrition, there is a widespread idea that researches on vitamins are a comparatively recent development. "Just a fad" is the expression sometimes heard. People in general, and even some professional people with technical education, are to some extent skeptical of the practical importance of vitamins or are misinformed in regard to them.

As a matter of fact, for more than two thousand years medical men have given thought to the nature of foods and the requirements of nutrition. Hippocrates, known as the "Father of Medicine," as early as the fifth century B. C. asserted that there existed a specific universal nutrient principle found in different kinds of natural foods.

The growth of our present-day knowledge in this field, like that in all other fields of science, was the result of successive attempts through the years to find out by experiment the answer to these early philosophical speculations about foods and how they nourished the body. Even the conception of vitamins—substances which are required in but small amounts and which until recently were too elusive for chemical study—dates back approximately one hundred and fifty years, when James Lind, a surgeon in the British Navy, matured his studies on a disease called scurvy.

What Are Vitamins?

Vitamin is a term used to indicate certain health-giving and disease-preventing elements which exist in many foods. They are now recognized as substances apart from the usual proteins, fats, carbohydrates and minerals and are virtually necessary for the proper use of these food elements by the body. In other words, the human body must get a sufficient amount of vitamins in order to grow properly and be healthy.

Practically all our present knowledge of vitamins has become known in the last thirty or forty years. During the early years of the twentieth century scientists established in their experiments that proper growth was impossible unless certain ingredients, then unknown, were present in the diet. Following up this line of research, it was established that these growth vitamins and the health vitamins were the same.

It is interesting to recall, however, that the recognition that there were vital elements in fresh fruits and vegetables goes back nearly 300 years to the days when early navigators, long out of touch with land, had to combat sickness among their crews, the sickness now identified as scurvy.

Today the scientific world knows of six vitamins, each of which has a distinct benefit in the diet. These vitamins are identified as A, B, C, D, E, and G. Vitamin D is the most recently discovered vitamin and also the first of the entire series to reveal its chemical nature. Unlike the other vitamins, very little of it is found in foods.

The "Sunshine Vitamin"

The main source of Vitamin D is exposure to the rays of the sun, hence the name of "sunshine vitamin." Until the recent perfection of the process for supplying vitamin D in bread, there were few other sources. Cod-liver oil is the only other important source furnished by Nature.

Few people realize the importance throughout the centuries of our having eaten yeast-raised bread. When we raise our bread with yeast in preparation for baking, we are manufacturing, as the yeast multiplies, the mother substance of vitamin D. This is called ergosterol. Ergosterol was first discovered in the oil of ergot, a smut which grows on rye if it is too wet at harvest time, but yeast likewise contains a generous amount in terms of our need. While there is a very small amount of ergosterol in many of our vegetable foods, this amount is perilously small.

We are constantly eating some ergosterol in the yeast in our bread. This is not the vitamin D, but can be converted into it. We absorb the ergosterol and it is distributed by the blood to all parts of the body including the skin. When the sun shines on the skin, it converts some of the ergosterol into Vitamin D; this is taken up by the tiny blood vessels in the skin and distributed throughout the body. The eating of ergosterol followed by exposure of the skin to sunshine is the equivalent of taking cod liver oil.

If one were to subsist for a time on a diet containing no ergosterol, his substance. If he were then to take sun baths, they would do him no good, for the sun's rays would not be able to form vitamin D in his skin.

In no field of human advancement has progress been more rapid, or the results more far-reaching, than in the nutritional field. Six deficiency diseases which appear when a person is deprived of one or other of the six vitamins are now known and the continuing researches in this field constitute a valuable aid to the promotion of health.

GADABOUT COATS ARE BECOMING POPULAR; LIKEWISE FIT PURSE

Attractive, Hard-Wearing Materials Combined With Low Prices

By ALICE LANGELIER
(U. S. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Gadabout coats for general wear are getting greatest attention from the smart French designers this season, combining handsome hard wearing materials with prices to suit nearly every purse.

The belted coat is popular with women with youthful slim silhouettes and the belt is also almost essential to coats of the sportive type. There is a feeling for the very large cuffs of fur, but for the early autumn tweeds which make a large majority of the general gadabout coats, the large fur collar alone is more suitable. The double sleeve is a feature of the general coat, a fashion that extends from the flimsy tea-gown to the fur-trimmed outer garment. The inner sleeve is rather tight and the large cuff buttons over it. Wide revers are also a favorite on many of these new coats.

Collars vary enormously. There are big shawl collars of fox and lynx, tailored collars like those on costumes, scarf collars of cloth or fur and the curious coachman's variety.

Barclay puts a tiny cape collar of castor fur on a beige cloth coat. It ties like a scarf at the neck and forms the only fastening.

Redferns trims a honey-beige tweed coat with golden Alaskan seal. The scarf collar is removable and the waistline is marked by a brown calf-skin belt with brass buckle.

Here is vital news about sunshine vitamin-D . . . and what it means to sound even teeth, straight strong bones, and . . .

HAPPIER HEALTH

SUNSHINE VITAMIN-D is Nature's first lieutenant in building straight strong bones, and sound even teeth—in strengthening resistance to colds and illness.

Yet up to now, no table-food provided enough of this vital food element. Plenty of foods furnish all the other vitamins, but not vitamin-D.

Now, this precious sunshine vitamin-D comes to you in Bond Bread. You can't see sunshine vitamin-D. You can't taste this wonderful health-source any more than you can taste sunshine itself. But it's there—in every loaf of Bond Bread—and in no bread except Bond! One to two slices each meal will give you and your children all the extra sunshine vitamin-D you need.

Get sunshine vitamin-D Bond Bread from your grocer. It tastes the same. It costs the same. It is the same delicious, home-like loaf that Flavor-Peak Rising insures. And now, this greatest improvement of all—sunshine vitamin-D. No bread ever before brought such untold value.

DRASTIC "PRESCRIPTION" BELIEVED NECESSARY TO STABILIZE CONDITION IN SOFT COAL FIELDS; "DIAGNOSTICIANS" DISAGREE AS TO "OPERATIONS"

United Mine Workers of America and Some Other Groups
Contend That Nothing But Government Regulation
Can Save the Situation

By C. EDWARD MORRIS
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1931, By L. N. S.)
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 9.—Nothing short of a major operation can restore the mighty sick monarch, King Coal, to vigorous health.

The industrial doctors agree that a course of treatment drastically different from anything thus far tried must be found to stabilize his vast realm, in which more than 125,000 miners face starvation and hundreds of mine owners are fighting off bankruptcy.

The patient's grave danger is made manifest by the fact that the most expert diagnosticians disagree violently as to which of several operations should be performed.

One group, including the United Mine Workers of America, several operators, both large and small, and the American Federation of Labor, contends that nothing but government regulation of the King's conduct can save him from his own follies.

Another group favors interstate control, made possible through cooperation of governors, miners and operators.

A third argues that only the operators understand the king's complicated ailments clearly enough to effect a cure.

John D. A. Morrow, president of the $165,000,000 Pittsburgh Coal Co., is among those who believe that King Coal's own subjects must themselves find the cure for their monarch.

"The best thing that could happen to the soft coal industry," he said to the writer, "would be for president Hoover to get up on his hind legs and say to the operators who run to Washington with their troubles:

"To hell with you! Go work out your own problem!"

"Even Uncle Sam can't repeal the law of supply and demand," was Morrow's answer to a question about a government-aided production curtailment program.

"Any cure for the soft coal industry must deal only with actual over-production today, but also with potential over-production in future.

"If the United States government wants to tackle that problem, one of the underlying causes of continued instability in the soft coal industry, there is one way it could do so: That would be to buy up coal lands and add them to 30,000,000 acres of such lands already in the public domain.

When it came to the questions of how King Coal is to be cured and when his recovery may be expected Mr. Morrow—like other operators, union officials, government experts and state officials with whom the writer talked during a 3,000 mile trip through the four states which produce 70 per cent of America's soft coal, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky—had less confident answers today.

"Time," temporized the president of the second largest coal producing company in the United States, "is a vital element in a chemical reaction, isn't it? Well, it's an equally important factor in the search for a cure for the long ailing soft coal industry.

"I, for one, do not believe in industrial miracles nor in any overnight cure-all for the coal industry. Most of the so-called 'plans' for stabilizing it fall apart when closely examined in a practical laboratory."

WHITE BEING USED BY AUTUMN BRIDE; GOES WITH SUN-TAN

Berry-Red Velvet Coats Used
With Silver for Attendants

By ALICE LANGELEIR
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Oct. 9.—The autumn bride and her bridesmaids are going white this season, with a few exceptions in the color line.

The main reason for the return to the old-fashioned and always-beloved wedding shade undoubtedly rests in the fact that the fashionable young bride who has been sunning herself at the smart beach this summer looks particularly well in white or off-white shades. And then there is the old-fashioned fondness for a white or cream-colored wedding-gown which has returned with the romantic modes of the '60's and '70's.

White satin closely moulded to the figure by means of crossed bands over the hips and a long train continuing from them comes for one modern autumn bride. The Victorian touch is provided by a shower bouquet of white carnations and white heather, together with trails of orange blossoms round the frilly chiffon-lined train and an old family lace veil falling from a full wreath of orange buds.

Another all-white bride has chosen ivory velvet for her gown and still another, deep-colored cream satin that is almost the tone of old parchment.

The ten pretty bridesmaids who attended a pretty bride at the Madeleine church recently were dressed in silver tissue with charming hip-length coats of bright berry-red velvet matching red berries in their silver wreaths.

Edwardian modes are replacing Victorian fashions and certain bridesmaids are wearing large puff sleeves, bolero jackets with little muffs to match and "Dolly Varden" hats with posies under the crown tying with ribbon under the chin.

DIRT TRACK RACERS READY FOR THE FRAY

LANGHORNE, Oct. 9.—Auto race stars who have whirled around the tilted boards at Altoona and Woodbridge speedways will have a chance to try out their skill on another type of track on Saturday, October 17, when Langhorne Speedway will offer the third auto race program of the year.

The forthcoming Langhorne races will follow out the style of racing which Ralph Hankinson, operator, offered on June 20, two 25-mile races and a 50-miler, when the late Jimmy Gleason was the speed hero of the day, winning the two dash races and leading the final until car trouble overtook him, after which Al Aspen breezed to victory.

It will be the wind-up big-time A. A. race of the year in the east and such drivers as Fred Frame, over half a dozen times the victor at Woodbridge, and a leading championship contender; Frank Brisko, whose car won the non-championship races at Altoona; Billy Winn, the dirt track scourge of the East; Paul Bost, who made such a game drive at the Labor Day Altoona races until injured; Herman Schuch, Rick Decker, Jimmy Patterson, Malcolm Fox and Burt Karnatz, virtually assured as entries.

Last year the three Langhorne races were won by Bill Cummings, Fred Frame and Frank Farmer. This year in May Billy Arnold was the winner, driving the same car which Frame will drive October 17, while in June under the new three-race policy Gleason and Aspen were victors.

Both two-man championship class and one-man non-championship class cars will be permitted, although mechanics will not ride.

DIGNITARIES WILL BE AT YORKTOWN OCT. 19TH

President Hoover to Be One of Nation's Guests; Battle Anniversary

KEYSTONE GIVES ROUTE

Yorktown, Va., in the heart of the historic James River country will be the scene of a most memorable event on October 19, when President Herbert Hoover and other leading dignitaries gather there as the nation's guests for the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the famous Battle of Yorktown.

The Keystone Automobile Club has outlined a delightful motor tour to this historic region for the benefit of motorists who desire to attend the Sesqui-centennial Celebration.

"The entire round trip can be covered in approximately 650 miles," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the club.

From Bristol the tour leads over the Boulevard then over Hunting Park Avenue and City Line Avenue, to Lancaster where a left turn is made on Lansdowne Avenue to Lansdowne, where a right turn on U. S. Route 1 leads southward to Baltimore.

From Baltimore U. S. Route 1 is followed through Washington, D. C., and across the Potomac River. Eight miles south of Alexandria a stop over can be made at Mt. Vernon the historic shrine where George Washington made his home. Through Fredericksburg the same national highway leads to Richmond where a left turn into U. S. Route 60 leads down into the heart of the Jamestown country. Williamsburg, the first important town reached was once the capital of colonial Virginia and scores of historic buildings on each side of the famous Duke of Gloucester Street date back to that period. William and Mary College, the George Wythe House, where Washington made his headquarters during the siege of Yorktown, the ancient colonial houses where Lafayette and Rochambeau lived, the old Raleigh Tavern, the Bruton Parish Church, the picturesque Powder Horn and the old jail that held pirates, Tories and other notorious prisoners are among some of the sights of this quaint old city.

From this point the travelers drive along the Yorktown Road to the famous Surrender Field where the British stacked their arms on the memorable day in October 1781 and Cornwallis capitulated to the patriot army. In Yorktown can be seen the Nelson Mansion still bearing battle scars the result from the American patriot General Nelson, who ordered his own home shelled when he learned that Lord Cornwallis was using it as his headquarters. Here too stands the oldest customs house in America while nearby is the Moore House where terms of the surrender were arranged.

To the south of Williamsburg the travelers can drive to Jamestown Island the site of that famous colony founded in 1607. The ivy clad ruins of the Old Church tower and the site of the famous fort that protected the white settlers from Indians are two of the most interesting objects found here. Monuments to the memories of Captain John Smith and Pocahontas also mark historic spots. The entire picture presented here is one that reveals the humble cradle of Anglo-Saxon civilization. The homeward journey can be made over the same route used on the outbound trip.

WHILE Notre Dame is completing plans for a national memorial to the late Knute Rockne, and football fans everywhere are anxious to contribute to it, it is interesting to note again how extraordinary the influence of that great coach still is on the game he did so much to popularize on a nation-wide scale. Think of it—more than thirty head coaches now in charge of college teams throughout the United States learned the high branches of the game with "Rock" as their teacher! And probably half a hundred assistant coaches are in a similar category. If ever anyone in politics, business, art or sport left living memorials, surely Rockne did.

Even at conservative old Yale—which was as famed in football during the "neolithic nineties" as Notre Dame in recent years—they have two of Rockne's star pupils assisting Chief Coach Dr. "Mal" Stevens. Adam Walsh, who centered the "Seven Mules" behind which the immortal "Four Horsemen" rode, is starting his first season trying to perfect a mighty Blue line. "Bucky" O'Connor—who must have seemed like "Four Horsemen" in one to Southern California last year—is helping groom the Eli freshmen. Of course, these are but two in a dozen other Yale coaches featuring Benny Friedman, Michigan wonder-product, who is tutoring Albie Booth and others in the art of passing. Stately old Yale, you know, is reluctant to admit adoption of any Rockne tactics, but they may be needed to beat Harvard, or Georgia, for that matter.

Starting with "Jimmy" Phelan, of Washington, here are some of the current coaching memorials to Rockne genius: Chet Wynne, Alabama Poly; Gene Oberst, Canis-
